

2009 Division III Men's All-America Team

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SALEM, Va. – D3hoops.com has announced its 12th annual Division III men's basketball All-American team. The team was chosen by D3hoops.com staff from 342 nominations by schools.

MIT guard Jimmy Bartolotta was named D3hoops.com Player of the Year after leading the Engineers to the second round of the NCAA Tournament, scoring 27.6 points while shooting 50 percent from the floor and 44 percent from three-point range.

Wooster guard Justin Hallowell, who scored 14.2 points per game and was 94-for-183 from three-point range, is the D3hoops.com Rookie of the Year. The award, in its second season, recognizes the best freshman in Division III basketball.

Glenn Robinson, the winningest coach in Division III men's basketball history, was named D3hoops.com Coach of the Year. His Franklin and Marshall Diplomats reached the Final Four while compiling a 26-6 record after the team was picked to finish fifth in the Centennial Conference. F&M was 12-13 in 2008.
