

Carleton College

Writing Science – IDSC 209 – Spring 2004

Cindy Blaha and Carol Rutz, Instructors

COURSE EVALUATION

Please consider the following questions carefully. We will use your feedback to improve this course the next time it is offered—tentatively, Spring 2006. Thank you!

This course was designed with certain goals in mind. Please comment on what you learned in relation to the following course goals:

1. Considering the audience when writing about science (or anything else).
2. Using images, text, and speech to communicate with an audience.
3. Responding to researchers about communicating their work in progress.
4. Responding to peers on their writing within specific expectations (your editorial guidelines).
5. Making decisions about your own writing in light of feedback from multiple readers.
6. Understanding the place of science and science writing in a social system.

Please use this page to argue for or against our offering this course again. What are the strengths? What could be improved? Please be specific!