ONGOING ART EVENTS

Through May 1: "Outside The Lines" features work by non-art majors, highlighting creations by juniors and seniors who use visual language to communicate about the many worlds of which they are a part, and the countless connections and contrasts that exist between art and "everything else." Boliou Hall.

Through May 9: "Artists Books: Radical Message, Revolutionary Means" draws from the Gould Library Special Collections and was curated by a group of art history students, led by Laurel Bradley, director of exhibitions. Artists' books differ from traditional books in that they themselves are considered works of art, not just vehicles for displaying art. Opening lecture (7:30-8:30 p.m., Boliou Hall Auditorium) and reception (8:30-10 p.m., Art Gallery) Friday, April 2, 7:30-10 p.m. More information at carleton.edu/campus/gallery.

Through May 31: "Victorian Novels: The Carleton ReMix" celebrates the creative collaborations created by students in English, photography, art history, and studio art—recreating Victorian novels by reimagining key characters, recreating illustrated serial editions of literary classics, and reanimating Victorian social practices through book design and photography—portraiture and cartes de visite (a Victorian business card). Gould Library.
