Here Are A Few Reasons We Support Carleton—please add yours.

“Private liberal arts colleges such as Carleton represent a uniquely American type of institution of higher learning. These colleges make an important contribution to the education of American students as well as deserving students from all over the world. Like other private colleges, Carleton relies largely on its alumni for the financial support it will need to sustain it for future generations of students. By giving generously, now, we insure that a diverse group of talented students will reap the same benefits of a Carleton education that we enjoyed.”

Mike Baum

“When my family was in bad financial shape, Carleton provided most of the “wherewithal’ that allowed me to go, live on campus, and participate fully in student life.

More abstractly, small liberal arts colleges provide a depth and breadth of experience which is unforgettable. Carleton has always been an institution that I have recommended knowing that our relationship has remained warm and intellectually valid over the years.”

Tom Hinds

“Carleton made so many things possible for me in my life that never would have happened otherwise. My Carleton education has enriched my life. I made lifelong friends at Carleton.”
