>> Last Game: Knights Fall to UST, 66-59

Tom Sawatzke poured in a career-best 26 points and Caleb Rosenow posted his third career double-double, but the Carleton College men's basketball team could not unseat first-place University of St. Thomas, falling 66-59.
Rosenow set a career high with 16 rebounds, besting his previous mark by three. In addition to the strong night on the glass, he added 14 points for his second double-double in the last week. The loss was the Knights fifth straight, their longest slide in more than a decade.

>> Familiar Faces on the Other Side

If Carleton head coach Guy Kalland spends extra time staring at the Augsburg bench, it's like because two of the Auggies assistants are very familiar to Kalland. Ryan Kershaw might be in his fifth year with Augsburg, but he is in his second season as Kalland's son-in-law having married Abby Kalland in August 2010. Another Augsburg assistant is former Knight basketball player Jake Phillips '01, who's in his fourth year with the Auggies.

>> Scouting Augsburg

Augsburg is tied for second in the MIAC and boasts one of--if not the top--post tandems in the conference. During league games Andy Greziak-Grimm is averaging 15.1 points and 8.8 rebounds while Cory Polta is adding 14.9 points and 7.0 boards. Their work down low helps the Auggies post the best rebounding figures in the conference.
When you combine the tough post play with the outside shooting of Taylor Schmidt (37-of-81 from three-point range), it's easy to see why this team can create some matchup problems.
Augsburg is holding teams to a league-low 60.8 points per game, thanks to limiting opponents to 40.2 percent shooting overall and a 27.4 percent success rate beyond the arc.
The Auggies started the year by beating Division I Houston Baptist University 74-68 in an exhibition contest in early November.

>> Carleton By the Numbers

Two Knights are among the MIAC leaders in scoring: Caleb Rosenow ranks sixth in the conference with 15.5 points per game, while Tom Sawatzke sits in ninth, averaging 14.8 ppg. Rosenow also ranks fourth in rebounding with 8.0 per game. Scott Theisen is second in the MIAC in steals. He has forced a total of 24 turnovers over the first half of the season, averaging 1.85 steals per game.
