::Daily Riddle::
Why did the football team go to the bank?
Answer in Friday’s NNB

::Riddle Answer::
A king decided to replace one of his ministers without causing too hard feelings. He summoned the minister and asked him to choose one of two folded notes. The king explained that one of the notes says “You are fired” and the other states “You stay.” However, the minister found out from a trusted spy that both notes actually say “You are fired.” What can the minister do to save his post?
Answer: Eat the note without looking at it and tell the King to show him what the remaining note says so the minister can know his fate (which is the OPPOSITE of the note remaining in the king’s hands)
What to say when a job interviewer asks “any questions for me?”

It can be easy to forget that interviews aren’t about you. They’re about your ability to do something for the people interviewing you. These questions — which focus on the needs, traits, and preferences of your future boss and future employer — demonstrate that you are somebody who is genuinely interested in their well-being, and in the success of the company you’re joining.

- What’s the biggest change your team has gone through in the last year? Does your team feel like things are getting better in the economy and for your business?
- If I get the job, how do I earn a “gold star” on my performance review? What are the key accomplishments you’d like to see in this role over the next year?
- How did you get your start in this industry? Why do you stay?
- How does sales / operations / technology / marketing / finance work around here? (I.e., groups other than the one you’re interviewing for.)
- About which competitor are you most worried?
- What type of people are successful here? What type of people are not?
- What’s one thing that’s key to this company’s success that somebody from outside the company wouldn’t know about?

LinkedIn Profile Tips for Job Seekers

- Get a Custom URL: It’s much easier to publicize your profile with a customized URL (ideally linkedin.com/yourname)
- Choose a Great Photo
- Write a Headline That Rocks: Your headline doesn’t have to be your job title and company—in fact, especially if you’re looking for jobs, it shouldn’t be. Instead, use that space to succinctly showcase your specialty, value proposition, or your “so what?”
- Use Your Target Job Descriptions to Your Advantage: Take a look at the job descriptions of the positions you’re after, and dump them into a word cloud tool like Wordle. See those words that stand out? They’re likely what recruiters are searching for when they’re looking for people like you
- Don’t waste your summer space: Ideally, your summary should be around 3–5 short paragraphs long, preferably with a bulleted section in the middle. It should walk the reader through your work passions, key skills, unique qualifications, and a list of the various industries you’ve had exposure to over the years
- Add Projects, Volunteer Experiences, or Languages
