So you wanted to know more about self-scheduled examinations?
Read on. If you have other questions, contact the Registrar’s Office.

What is a self-scheduled final exam?
- Each course that has a non-take home final examination has been assigned an exam slot during finals week. See the Registrar’s web site for a list of final exam slots. However, some faculty have also designated their final examinations as either optional or mandatory self-schedulable. If a final examination is self-schedulable, this means that a student may decide to take the final exam during any of the ten final exam slots.

How do I sign up for a self-scheduled final exam?
- If the instructor is offering the course as an optional self-scheduled exam, during the last week of classes, inform your instructor that you intend to self-schedule your final in his/her course. Your instructor will notify the Registrar of your intent by providing that office with an individually labeled examination envelope containing your examination.
- If the instructor is only offering the exam as a self-scheduled exam, you do not need to sign up, the instructor will provide the Registrar’s Office with your examination.

Where do I go to take a self-scheduled final exam?
- Report to the Concert Hall lobby.

When do I go to take a self-scheduled final exam?
- Report to the Concert Hall Lobby at least 15 minutes prior to the time slot during which you wish to take your self-scheduled exam. See the back of the Schedule of Classes for a list of final exam slots.
- There will be limited space available for self-scheduled final exams. Exam seats will be assigned on a first-come first-serve basis.

Then what?
- Present your picture ID (required) at the exam distribution table to receive your examination envelope.
- You will be directed to your examination room. You may bring no materials with you to your seat, except pencils or pens and your examination envelope. You may also bring a calculator to a calculator-aided exam.
- The room supervisor will tell you when you may open your examination envelope to begin testing. No envelope may be opened prior to this announcement.
- The room supervisor will tell you when the exam period is over. You must stop writing when so directed and follow the supervisor’s directions for turning in your completed examination. Exams will not be accepted from students under any other conditions. If the room is crowded, you might not be allowed to leave the room prior to the end of the exam period; proctors will inform you of any such restriction at the beginning of the exam.

What if I change my mind?
- Once you have picked up your examination envelope from the distribution site, you will not be allowed to back out of taking your examination.
- Anytime prior to picking up your examination envelope, you may opt to take the regularly scheduled exam unless the instructor is only offering the exam as a self-scheduled exam (and provided it has not already been given). Simply report to your regularly scheduled exam room at the appropriate time. Do not pick up your examination at the distribution site.

What about academic honesty?
- To avoid even the appearance of academic dishonesty, don’t talk about exams at all until after the last exam is over!!! For example if someone asks you, “How was the test?” the only appropriate answer is “I can’t talk about the exam, sorry!”
“Where in the World is the Class of 2014 (Senior Social)” will be on Tuesday from 2-3pm in the Great Hall. Come talk about what adventures your classmates and friends will be having next!

Tips and a Toast for the Class of 2014 at 2:30pm!!!
Snacks and drinks will be served, as well as some fresh beats from DJs Reeder and Habermann.

McKinsey & Company would like to invite talented Carleton women to attend an exclusive workshop on July 26th, 2014 in Chicago, IL.
This workshop brings female undergraduate leaders together and encourages them to work together to increase the impact of females in the workplace.
This one-day program will include dynamic workshops, inspiring presentations and discussion panels.

It was a pleasure working with you this year and congratulations & good luck to the class of 2014!

A few quick steps can clean up the clutter that is clogging your Twitter and Facebook accounts.

By HANNA INGBER
New York Times

Being active on social media platforms like Twitter and Facebook is kind of like having an extra closet that you can fill with clutter to the point where you can’t find anything you need.

But just like you can do spring cleaning in your closets, you can keep your social accounts tidy with a little attention. Here are some tips for cleaning out your feeds and timelines and making social platforms more useful. (These steps are to be used with the Full Facebook site on a computer, not a mobile device.)

• Prioritize your friends. On Facebook, as in life, some friends are better than others. To fill your news feed with more photographs and status updates from people you truly care about, separate your Facebook friends into two groups “close friends” and “acquaintances.” Facebook with feature your close friends’ posts more prominently in your news feed. To add a friend to a specific list, go to the person’s page and hover over the “friends’ button. A drop-down menu will appear with different options.
• Unfollow the ranters. If you would rather skip the endless dog photos a former roommate posts on Facebook, you don’t need to go as far as removing him from your list of friends. Instead, when you see your friend’s name appear in your news feed, pull down the arrow on the right side of the post and click “Unfollow.” Your former roommate won’t be notified that his posts no longer appear in your feed.
• Another option is to choose “I don’t want to see this.” This will hide a particular photo or rant from your feed. Facebook will then try to use that information to show you more appealing posts in the future.
• Cut out annoying ads. On Facebook, pull down the arrow next to the post in your news feed and choose to the option to hide all ads from the brand.
• Trim back groups. Many users end up joining countless Facebook groups and soon can’t remember who or what some of these groups are. To subtly sneak out the back door, go to the page with your news feed and next to “Groups” in the left column click on “More.” Next to each one listed, click on the icon on the right that looks like a wheel. You can decide if you want to leave the group or simply turn off notifications from it.

To RSVP for any of these events, login to the Tunnel, click on the “Events” tab and within that tab select “Information Session” or “Workshop.” Here you will see all the upcoming events the Career Center is sponsoring/hosting!
