::Carleton Fun Fact::

As Carleton goes, the nation does NOT: In presidential election straw polls, Carls were overwhelmingly Republican throughout the FDR/Truman years, and then later overwhelmingly Democratic during Nixon, Reagan, and Bush landslides. In 1980, Ronald Reagan ran 4th at Carleton with 7% support, behind John Anderson, Jimmy Carter, and Barry Commoner of the Citizen's Party.

Check out Religion's Fall Courses

RELG 100: Religion and American Landscape Professor Michael McNally, A&I

The American landscape has shaped and has been shaped by the religious imaginations, beliefs, and practices of diverse inhabitants. Indigenous and Latino/a traditions will be considered, as will Euro American traditions ranging from Puritans, Mormons, immigrant farmers, utopian communities, and Deep Ecologists.

RELG 100: Religion, Law, Religious Law

Professor Noah Salomon, A&I

This course will explore the intersections of religion and law in the U.S. and in many parts of the Islamic world, looking at how religion and law come to shape one another and why their intersection is often at the center of key contemporary conflicts, both domestic and international.

RELG 110: Understanding Religion

Professor Kristin Bloomer, 4a

How can we best understand the role of religion in the world today, and how should we interpret the meaning of religious traditions – their texts and practices – in history and culture? This class takes an exciting tour through selected themes and puzzles related to the fascinating and diverse expressions of religion around the world.

From religion and politics, to religious philosophies and spiritual practices, to rituals and spirit possession, pop culture, gender and religious authority, and more, students will explore how these issues emerge in a variety of religions and places. Counts as IDS and WR2.

RELG 210: Prophecy & Social Criticism in America Professor Kevin Wolfe, 5/6c

What makes for prophetic discourse in American public life? This course examines the religious and philosophical roots of prophecy as a form of American social criticism. In particular we interrogate the Afro-American Jeremiad, a mode of public exhortation that calls for spiritual and political renewal. Is this still a viable mode of African American social criticism today, and can it provide a prophetic critique of capitalism?

RELG 225: Losing My Religion Professor Lori Pearson, 2a

What happens when religion loses its plausibility--whether intellectually, morally, or in relation to scientific understandings of the world? We explore how modern Western theologians and philosophers have grappled with the loss of traditional religious categories, and how they have found new ways of naming the religious and the sacred, whether in relation to existential meaning, moral hope, prophetic insight, or passionate love.

RELG 245: Native American Religious Freedom

Professor Michael McNally, 4a
*Academic Civic Engagement Course***

This course explores historical and legal contexts in which Native Americans have practiced their religions in the United States. The course explores landmark court cases in Sacred Lands, Peyotism, free exercise in prisons, and sacralized traditional practices (whaling, fishing) and examines the conceptual framework of "religion" as it has been applied to the practice of Native American traditions.

RELG 267: Bhagavad Gita Professor Roger Jackson, 4/5c

The Bhagavad Gita is one of the most beloved and influential of Hindu texts, a rich source of reflection about the meaning and purpose of life. This course will center on a close reading of the Gita, within its context in Indian religious thought and the epic of which it is a part, the Mahabharata. We also will explore modern interpretations of the Gita, by Gandhi and other Indians, and by Western artists working in various media.

SCA SPOTLIGHT – LYDIA CHU '17

Working in the Career Center as a Student Assistant my freshman year was surprisingly, one of the biggest influences for both my professional and non-professional career, and I can say the job changed my life in many ways because it exposed to me the many advantages and resources Carleton has to offer, and consequently, the valuable aspects of a Carleton education. What started out as an administrative job - making appointments and posters- turned into a job of getting to know people and the larger world outside of Carleton. Through speaking to career counselors and learning about personal/career development, I ended up getting an internship in rural India and applied for funding, 'Robert E Will Fund for Social Entrepreneurship', which made it possible for me to travel to India and pursue the internship within the realms of international development. Little did I know when departing for India that I wouldn't be coming back to Carleton for Fall term, and would be backpacking up and down the Indian subcontinent and ending with 2 months in the proximity of Tibetan Buddhist monasteries, and the giant Himalayan mountains of Nepal.

A big part of my intention of taking a gap semester was to learn what else was out there in the world, and be in a space to meet people I wouldn't usually in a college setting. Ultimately, the relevance between my work in the Career Center, being a student at Carleton, and backpacking on my own, is that all these involve the process of personal development, exploration, and being open. I learned from not planning and embracing uncertainty the benefits of being open to opportunities as they arise, and letting these opportunities take you places. Similarly, from what I've learned in an academic setting, and through Career Center-related events, so much of what shapes our professional career is also being open and focusing on learning what we can in the moment. What I've learned from backpacking and is transferable to my time now at Carleton and in the future, is that it is not important to have a plan, but it is important to be prepared and the willingness to go with the flow. And that is why I am very glad to be at Carleton gaining a liberal arts education because I believe it will seriously prepare us in the long-run to embrace any opportunity that arises to attain a meaningful life and career.
