Career Counselor Spotlight – Alena Rivera

(Alena is the Program Director for Student Engagement in the Career Center, and will be leaving Carleton this month after 4 years of working with students here.)

What advice do you have for students trying to figure out what to do with their summers or after leaving Carleton?

Get creative and think of things that you would enjoy doing. Surround yourself with people you can learn from, but also be able to contribute your strengths at the same time. Because I love to help people, I’ve always looked for opportunities where I can help people but also grow, learn new things, and be challenged. Definitely challenge yourself—think outside of the box. Think of opportunities where you can improve yourself, but also benefit others.

Does the Career Center stress creativity enough in helping students find meaningful experiences?

Yes, we definitely encourage all students to network and to learn more about the opportunities that are out there through informational interviewing. Personally, I encourage students to think of organizations at which they would love to work, and then go specifically to that website—to that organization, and look for opportunities. Then if they don’t find anything, I tell students to call the hiring manager—to be proactive in their job search.

What would you like to see more of in the Career Center?

I would like to see more students coming in and working, so that they can learn from their peers. I am a strong advocate for peer-to-peer interaction, and especially in the job search process, it’s really valuable to speak with an SCA (Student Career Advisor) who can share a success story with you. I would like to have an atmosphere where students are coming in and excited about applying for jobs.

Also, I’d like to see more informational resources for international students and for students who want to go out of the country to work.

What did you like about Carleton?

The students. You guys have inspired me in so many ways to keep following my dreams. I’m seeing what you as young adults are doing immediately after college and it’s been a great learning experience. And of course, forming some great relationships with some of my colleagues. Long lasting friendships have come out of this.
