This award-winning drama tells the story of an African American family living on Chicago’s south side in the 1950s. Recently widowed, Lena Younger receives a check from her husband’s life insurance and plans to buy a house for her family, freeing them from the cramped tenement in which she, her two children, daughter-in-law, and granddaughter live. However, her son, Walter, plans to invest the money in a business as a way to become the man of the family. As one dream is fulfilled, another is deferred.
