From the Perlman Center for Learning and Teaching:

Reminder to all interested faculty:

Mellon Faculty Life Cycles Grant Winter Break Workshop, December 10-12, 2003
Mary Savina, Facilitator
(coordinated through the Perlman Center for Learning and Teaching)

Themes:

Group A: Being interdisciplinary in a departmental world (finding working partners on campus, effects of department structure, hiring, etc.) Common readings may include sections of Learning to Think: Disciplinary Perspectives, Janet Gail Donald, 2002; Academic Tribes and Territories, Tony Becher and Paul R. Trowler (2nd edition, 2001) and a variety of articles. If you are interested in carrying forth the discussions at the Faculty Retreat and the LTC session on interdisciplinary thought, this is the place to do it.

Group B: Setting priorities for professional life (“Now that I know all the things I want to do, how do I decide what to do next?”) Common readings (to be decided) may include To Do Doing Done, G. Lynne Snead, Joyce Wycoff (Contributor), The Man Who Mistook His Job for a Life, Jonathon Lazear and/or Working Ourselves to Death, Diane Fassel. If you want to continue working with the themes of the 2001 and 2002 winter break workshops, this is the place to do it.

Schedule:

Wednesday, December 10
Noon: Joint luncheon with the Writing workshop, AGH meeting room
1:30 – 4 pm: Groups A and B meet separately,
4:30-?: field trip to the Contented Cow

Thursday, December 11
8:15 - 9:00 am: continental breakfast, Sayles-Hill 251, 252, 253
9:00 – 11:30 am: Groups A and B meet separately

Friday, December 12
8:15 – 9:00 am: continental breakfast, Sayles-Hill 251, 252, 253
9:00 – 11:30 am: Groups A and B meet separately
Noon: lunch and wrap-up discussion, Sayles-Hill Atrium and 251

Stipend: Participants in all three days of the workshop will receive a stipend of $360.

Contact: Jennifer Cox Johnson, x4192 or jcoxjohn@carleton.edu to sign up!