Course Description

This course will attempt to provide a reasonably comprehensive survey of the study of world politics. Nonetheless, three things should be kept in mind. First, in one semester, it is possible to only scratch the surface of what is a complex and extensive literature. Second, any introductory course on IR theory inevitably will be structured by the instructor's biases. Some topics and levels of analysis will receive emphasis here that might well be slighted by other instructors. A number of topics, equally inevitably, will simply be ignored. Finally, an exposure to the nooks and crannies of a subfield should help sensitize students to the virtues and liabilities of various approaches and analyses. By the time the course is over, the hope is that students will have gained a theoretical understanding of the dynamics at play in world politics and sharp intellectual tools to approach these dynamics and make sense out of the apparent chaos of international relations.

Course Requirements

Class attendance and participation (25 % of your final grade)

Attendance will be taken at the beginning of each session. Each student starts the class with 10 attendance point. You will lose 1 point from your attendance grade every time you are absent. For instance, if you miss 4 classes you will receive 6 instead of 10 attendance points. Only documented absences will be accepted (e.g. doctor’s note).
Students are expected to participate actively in the class. I will be asking you to contribute to class discussions and will invite you to offer your opinion on required readings or on related events unfolding as the course goes on.

Quizzes (10% of your final grade)

Throughout the term you will take two quizzes. They will have several components such as multiple choice questions, short answers, true/false questions and so forth. You will be tested to see whether you understood the general line of an argument, or the main events that shaped the outlook of a historical turning point.

Mid-term (25% of your final grade)

The Mid-term will be divided into two parts: 1) A series of questions to which you will be expected to reply with short answers. The questions will cover all the material discussed in class from the first lecture to the last. 2) An essay you will be asked to write and which will test your ability to think critically on the material we covered. Reading the material and taking notes in class is indispensable to do well in the exam, but it takes more than just that. You must demonstrate an ability to reflect analytically on the topic and express your own opinions and ideas.

Term paper (40% of your final grade)

We will discuss the topics you could work on for the final paper in class, or in office hours.

What is expected of you as you do the readings?

As you read, you will be expected to think critically by asking yourselves the following questions:

1) What is the author’s main argument?
2) Do I find that argument convincing or not? Why?
3) What alternative explanations can be thought of for the author’s evidence?
4) What are the implications of the argument made by the author?
