To whom it may concern,

In Spring of 2012 the Carleton College Board of Trustees resolved to support the separation of the Board Chair and Corporate Executive Officer positions at Goldman Sachs. Experience and analysis have demonstrated that the separation of these two offices is an important step in creating a culture of accountability within corporate governance, and ultimately in promoting the long-term financial success of the company.

As you know, the resolution's sponsors withdrew the resolution from the annual proxy ballot after reaching an agreement on appointing John Bryan as Goldman Sach's independent Chairman. We commend management's willingness to work with investors, and we look forward to continued dialogue and improvement in the future. Please feel free to contact us with any further questions or points of discussion.

Please note that this letter is sent by us as stockholders for your information, and is not to be construed as a request for a proxy vote in 2013.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Bakhtawar Chaudhary, Co-Chair CRIC (email: chaudhab@carleton.edu)

On behalf of the Committee and the Carleton College Trustees
RESOLVED: That shareholders of Goldman Sachs ("Goldman" or the "Company") ask the Board of Directors to adopt a policy that the Board’s Chairman be an independent director according to the definition set forth in the New York Stock Exchange listing standards, unless Goldman common stock ceased being listed there and is listed on another exchange, at which point, that exchange’s standard of independence should apply. If the Board determines that a Chairman who was independent when he or she was selected is no longer independent, the Board shall promptly select a new Chairman who satisfies this independence requirement. Compliance with this requirement may be excused if no director who qualifies as independent is elected by shareholders or if no independent director is willing to serve as Chairman. This independence requirement shall apply prospectively so as not to violate any Company contractual obligation at the time this resolution is adopted.

Supporting Statement: Goldman’s CEO Lloyd Blankfein also serves as chairman of the Company’s board of directors. We believe the combination of these two roles in a single person weakens a corporation’s governance which can harm shareholder value. As Intel’s former chairman Andrew Grove stated, "The separation of the two jobs goes to the heart of the conception of a corporation. Is a company a sandbox for the CEO, or is the CEO an employee? If he’s an employee, he needs a boss, and that boss is the board. The chairman runs the board. How can the CEO be his own boss?"

In our view, shareholder value is enhanced by an independent board chair who can provide a balance of power between the CEO and the board, and support strong board leadership. The primary duty of a board of directors is to oversee the management of a company on behalf of its shareholders. But if the chair of the board is not independent from the CEO, a conflict of interest can result in excessive management influence on the board and weaken the board’s oversight of management.

An independent board chair has been found in academic studies to improve the financial performance of public companies. A 2007 Booz & Co. study found that in 2006, all of the underperforming North American companies whose CEOs had long tenure lacked an independent board chair (The Era of the Inclusive Leader, Booz Allen Hamilton, Summer 2007). A more recent study found worldwide, companies are now routinely separating the jobs of chair and CEO: in 2009 less than 12 percent of incoming CEOs were also made chair, compared with 48 percent in 2002 (CEO Succession 2000–2009: A Decade of Convergence and Compression, Booz & Co., Summer 2010).

We believe that independent board leadership would be particularly constructive at Goldman to address conflicts of interest described in a 2011 Senate report as leading Goldman to "place its financial interests before those of its clients." (Wall Street and The Financial Crisis, US Senate, April 13, 2011, p. 376).

We urge shareholders to vote for this proposal.
