Reflections on a journey to what once was home

BY DANA KRAUS

On the cold morning of October 1, hurricane Katrina hit the shore back home. Strangely, I did not look forward to my homecoming. It would be to confront the emotional and physical vacuum and void that day because Katrina had destroyed and taken away theHurricane Katrina in New Orleans.

Viewpoint

By Chris Petit

Chris Petit is a member of the class of 2006. He is an Environmental Studies concentrator and Student Council representative of the community's sustainability coordinator. In his column, he covers the environmental and societal implications of sustainability in the context of society.

The Green Piece...a weekly column by ENTS students

The author's home in New Orleans before (left) and after Hurricane Katrina.