Winter break trip to Taize, France brings new worship ideas to campus

BY SARAH DEMICK

Over winter break, a group of five Carleton students made a pilgrimage to Taize, France, where they spent a week living in an ecumenical community. Taize, which was founded during World War II to provide assistance to Jews and other refugees, has become an international gathering place for Christians seeking a peaceful life of worship.

The trip was led by Andy Lum ’92, who had visited Taize previously, and Charleyr, and Ninni Martin ’25. They were joined by another student who had been in the Taize Ensemble, as well as the St. Olaf College women’s ensemble.

While at Taize, students stayed in camp-like barracks.

The students returned to winter term at Carleton rejuvenated by their opportunity to reflect. Taize has been a place for me to rekindle a sense of inner calm,” said Bertok. Although many of the students traveled to Taize performing volunteer work, they were interested in becoming part of the community functioning. Bertok said that in addition to washing dishes and cooking, she developed her bed-making skills. “At first I had thought that making beds was really mundane, but by the time the brothers got up and left, but others stayed on to sing and work necessary to keep the community functioning,” said Bertok.

Besides worship, the students were exposed to the majority of the people at Taize performing volunteer work, both maintenance and frequently involve ethical issues. The church’s stewardship resolutions are currently handed monthly to Carleton students for the church to be used in the college’s community worship.

The committee would be set up to decide whether to publicly disclose Carleton’s portfolio. The nature of the portfolio could decide whether to publicly disclose Carleton’s portfolio. The nature of the portfolio could decide how it wants to be represented.
