Updates on COVID-19, Spring Break and Spring Term

Students were recently notified about Spring Term housing decisions, and we’re happy to be able to accommodate all those who requested to live and study on campus. As indicated in Dean Livingston’s most recent message to students, those who were on campus for Winter Term and are also approved to live on campus in the spring can use this form to request housing during spring break. Spring Term classes will begin on Monday, March 29, as planned, but will be held remotely for the first week.

Student entrepreneurs compete for $10,000 fellowship

The Carleton Start-Up Competition offers teams of students a chance to pitch their best entrepreneurial ideas, and compete for funding to support their ventures. Alumni judges will select winners based on a written proposal and oral pitches. You’re invited to watch the oral pitches and to celebrate the great entrepreneurial spirit on campus!

Are you a Carleton donor?

If you’ve made the decision to support the Parents Fund, we want to hear from you! We are compiling short, 20-second videos from donors to help encourage others to give. Hearing from other parents is very important. Help support the Parent’s Fund by sharing your experience using this form.

Career Center: Connecting students and employers using Instagram

Especially during the COVID-19 pandemic, the Career Center has worked to reach students in unique and meaningful ways to support their career development. One of our newer initiatives is hosting Employer Takeovers on Instagram. This term, we leveraged this unique tool to connect students and potential employers, including Epic, Dennos Museum, and the Peace Corps. Follow the Career Center on Instagram and see what other events are coming up.

Staff and faculty begin anti-racism training

In January, Carleton’s community-wide antiracism training began with the first required session for faculty and staff: “What Does It Mean for Carleton to Commit to Antiracism?” Led by Dr. Bryana French and Dr. Stephen Brookfield, this event introduced staff and faculty to the fundamentals of a serious and sustained conversation about race and the organizing principles and commitments that inform how the trainers will work in the months to come with different elements of the Carleton community.

The Antiracism Training website provides more details about the trainers’ backgrounds and philosophy and the topics they will address.

Winter fun at Carleton

Besides the upcoming Winterfest, there are plenty of everyday activities that students can safely have fun with in the winter. Having a sense of humor about the cold is also essential to surviving a Minnesota winter, as these students from the Class of 2016 demonstrate.
