The Carleton Convocations program is a weekly lecture series to stimulate thought and conversation on a wide range of subjects. We invite parents and families to join these live Zoom events with the campus community, or watch recordings after the event.

If your student has questions, they can email healthpromotion@carleton.edu to provide a new service for remote learners! Students can request a variety of supplies via our OHP website. The Office of Health Promotion supports the health and well-being of all Carls. We are excited to announce the launch of a free mailing service (e.g., stress toys, menstrual products, bluelight glasses, sleep masks).

Recently, Dean Livingston shared a message with the campus community about our current COVID-19 updates. For the most current campus testing data, as well as links to the Minnesota Department of Health and Rice County COVID-19 case data, please visit Carleton’s COVID-19 campus updates.

As part of a year-long initiative, the History Department is hosting the Online lectures on Race and History. The next lecture will be on February 15, and recordings of past lectures are also available.

On February 12, 12:30pm Central, Sharon Washington Risher, author and executive director of the National Museum of African American History and Culture, will discuss her personal and professional experience as the first African American to lead a Smithsonian museum. In her book, Losing a Loved One: Gun Violence and the Struggle for Control, journalist and author Sharon Washington Risher shares her firsthand account of losing a loved one to gun violence.

On February 15, 6pm Central: The History Department will host a lecture titled Black Media, Past and Present. Featuring a lecture by Harry McKinley Williams, Laird Bell Professor of History, emeritus. Join us on February 15, 6pm Central for a lecture titled Black Media, Past and Present.
